HOW TO READ SHAKESPEARE

Suggested Trains of Thought Ought to Rise Above Reader's Version of Author.

You talk about reading Shakespeare, using him as an expression for the highest intellect, and you wonder that any common person should be so presumptuous as to suppose his thought can rise above the text which lies before him. But think a moment. A child's reading of Shakespeare is one thing and Coleridge's or Schlegel's reading of him is another. The saturation point of each mind differs from that of every other. But I think it is as true for the small mind, which can only take up a little, as for the great one, which takes up much, that the suggested trains of thought and feeling ought always to rise above—not the author, but the reader's mental version of the author, whoever he may be.

I think most readers of Shakespeare sometimes find themselves thrown into exalted mental conditions, like those produced by music. Then they may drop the book, to pass at once into the region of thought without words. We may happen to be very dull folks, you and I, and probably are, unless there is some particular reason to suppose the contrary. But we get glimpses now and then of a sphere of spiritual possibilities where we, dull as we are now, may sail in vast circles round the largest compass of earthly intelligence.

His Probable Fate.

"What, some ways I'd like to an' some ways I guess I wouldn't," said honest Farmer Bentover, when the staid dispenser of encyclopedias had paused in his stony song. "Ye see, if I was to sign for that 'ere cyclopedee in forty-seven parts, includin' the index an' appendicils, I'm sorter afraid I'd hev to work so hard to pay fer it that I'd be too tired to enjoy readin' it; while if I read it at my leisure, as I'd ort to, in order to git the good of it, I wouldn't hev time to earn the price. So, all things considered, I guess I'll hev to deny myself the privilege, as it were. Looks sorter like rain off to the northwest, don't it?"

Two Ways of Looking at It

There are "just groceries" and good groceries. Maybe you've thought of it as "just groceries," but there is a deal of difference.

We sell good groceries, and by that we mean groceries that will not only bear the inspection of a pure food law, but your inspection—final and autocratic.

We sell standard brands, with the makers guarantee back of them and conscience wrapped in their packages with the goods. We sell them with our own guarantee—and even if you don't know the manufacturer, you know us—and you can get at us.

Nobody guarantees "just groceries" and nobody refunds money if by chance you may be dissatisfied in any way.

We do both.
